

FWLS Was Indexed in ESCI of Web of Science

Forum for World Literature Studies (FWLS) was indexed by Thomson Reuters in Web of Science: Emerging Sources Citation Index in 2015. As a new index in the Web of Science™ Core Collection, Emerging Sources Citation Index (ESCI) expands the citation universe and reflects the growing global body of science and scholarly activity. ESCI complements the highly selective indexes by providing earlier visibility for sources under evaluation as part of SCIE, SSCI, and A&HCI's rigorous journal selection process. Inclusion in ESCI provides greater discoverability which leads to measurable citations and more transparency in the selection process.

With an international editorial board and published by Knowledge Hub Publishing Company Limited, FWLS publishes peer-reviewed, open access and original articles on topics including theoretical studies, literary criticism, literary history, and cultural studies, as well as book reviews in the areas of world literature studies, particularly, the study of literature of those neglected countries and culture regions. FWLS has been steadily establishing its reputation since the first issue of 2009, which is indicated by its indexation in SCOPUS, the databases of EBSCO, Gale, MLA(MLA International Bibliography) and ABELL(The Annual Bibliography of English Language and Literature).

We are very excited that FWLS is now officially recognized by the Thomson Reuters and publications in FWLS since 2015 can be tracked in Web of Science, which is an important step for its becoming more visible in the community of arts and Humanities. For this important milestone in the history of FWLS, we would like to thank all the editorial board members for their advice and contributions and all the editorial staff for their hard and highly effective work. We especially want to thank all our authors for contributing their wonderful articles and all the reviewers for providing the top notch professional expertise. This milestone, as important as it is, however, is just a new beginning for our next goal: to be included in Arts and Humanities Citation Index (A&HCI). We will, as always, make continuous efforts to let FWLS be the best forum and media for scholars and authors to share their insights into literature studies.
